About Course

This course in Arbitration, Mediation, and Conflict Resolution in the Public Sector is designed to help professionals develop essential negotiation, communication, and dispute-resolution skills tailored to public sector dynamics. Participants will learn how to identify sources of conflict, apply appropriate resolution techniques, and manage interpersonal and organizational tensions through principled negotiation and structured mediation.

Course Overview

Arbitration, negotiation and conflict resolution are central to public administration and service delivery. This course is designed to help participants understand the principles, strategies, and tactics that work best while developing their negotiation skills to resolve conflicts and influence others effectively.

This experiential and discussion-based course will examine conflict resolution approaches, conflict analysis and assessment, and practice listening and communication strategies that lead to sound decision-making and win-win outcomes.

Our goal is to provide participants with the learning tools and frameworks needed to manage conflict by managing emotions constructively and becoming more comfortable in developing the insight, intuition, and abilities for handling intense situations that result in effective resolutions.

We will do this by coaching participants to understand how, why, where, and when to apply conflict resolution and negotiation approaches as we analyze what strategies work best, and under what circumstances they are most effective.

Course Objectives

This course aims to equip participants with a strategic understanding of conflict resolution, enhance negotiation confidence, and strengthen their ability to mediate disputes with professionalism and fairness in the public sector.
